I am the anonymous woman in the Clayton scandal. Here's the proof. Here's my story:

As a side note, for those who are questioning whether I want attention/followers, please remember I am anonymous in this case. I deactivated my Instagram earlier this week, accidentally logged into that account again, and Instagram will not let me deactivate my account again for a week. I have tried. I don't want money from Clayton. All I have asked for is communication to figure out a parenting plan.

Please remember that Clayton has not denied that he sent any of these messages. He has been warned that if he does not take down his second story, he will be sued. He is trying to spread false information about me. The two other cases that I have in family court are restraining orders against a man from 2021 and 2022. I have told him that putting me out to the wolves like that regarding cases where I have a restraining order against a man is not okay. It feels unfair and cruel, and for a man who is a mental healthy/suicide prevention advocate, it crushes me that he won't take it down.

Goodbye Reddit

I was not a "Redditor" before this case and I won't be after. The way that people have treated me on this site, and seem to treat anyone really, is with cruelty and hate. You guys are coming from a place of pure ignorance in regards to what happened between me and Clayton, but have an extremely cruel way that you communicate with others. I have seen people say that I should consider killing myself, that I am evil, unhinged, insane, a lunatic, mentally ill, dumb. Another favorite was that I've only been successful because of "mommy and daddy" (your words, not mine) when you all know NOTHING about how I grew up. None of you know what happened that night between Clayton and I when he was "insanely high" as he wrote in his email to me, which I'm sure you have all viewed on Dropbox. Clayton has never denied that we hooked up. He never denied that he sent each and every one of the messages that I have posted. People don't know that the reason he has held animosity towards me is because of a real estate transaction gone wrong, where he didn't even submit one of two offers I signed. I reported him to the ADRE after I lost out on the property and he was found in violation of a professional code for never submitting it. That's why he has been angry with me. You act like you're great detectives, but you didn't realize that the order of protection that was posted two days ago wasn't actually real. All restraining orders in Maricopa County are public record, and I have never had one taken out against me anywhere. I have taken out two in Maricopa County, one in 2021 and one in 2022, and both were against the same man. You guys know NOTHING about the prior two relationships I was in, nor the abuse I suffered. To see people call my abusers "victims" makes me sick (although I know they both come on Reddit and have posted themselves). I would never falsely accuse anyone and misuse the system. I would also never "pretend" to be a law firm, which I have been accused of in a circulating doc. My abuser did that, and the lawyer he claimed I was impersonating is actually a family friend, who backed me up 100% in supporting documents. My lawyer also wrote the cease and desist letter that was sent to Clayton, and I know a Redditor contacted him to confirm it, which he did. I don't "fake" pregnancies to trap men, which is a horrible thing to be accused of. The two documents that were "leaked" were never heard by the court and were allegations by my AZ abuser in one case and by my CA abuser's brother-in-law in the other. There was never a doubt that I was pregnant in either case. My AZ abuser had the pregnancy personally confirmed to him by One Medical. My CA abuser went to Planned Parenthood with me to get the abortion. He and I stayed together for two years afterwards, and in the transcript from the deposition, he said that he was in the relationship for me and didn't care what I decided to do about the pregnancy. I have all of the medical documentation in the Dropbox that I tried to post the other day, but took down after being bullied. So please stop acting as if there is any other story. You guys don't want to believe the truth even if you're shown it because it's more entertaining to hurt me, apparently. Another theory that has been horrible is that I somehow wrote the letter from the stranger I talked about in my speech, did my TEDx, and then asked a woman to take a photo with me for my Instagram. Do you realize how "insane" that sounds? As further proof, the woman wrote a declaration for me, which helped me get me RO against him. I've had people message me saying "they" needed to see a sonogram. Clayton has already seen it and that's all that matters to me. I don't owe you guys anything, nor should I have to prove myself when I am telling the truth. Yes, I've been pregnant before and yes I have two restraining orders against vicious men, but that doesn't make me a bad person or equate to me faking a pregnancy with Clayton. I feel sorry for those of you who have chosen to spend your precious time here simply to make a nasty comment, not caring that there is someone who will be hurt by it. My family has been on call since I have spent my week crying for hours over what I have read on this forum. I've finally come to terms with the fact that I don't need to convince the Reddit community of anything, especially when no one cares to read any of the facts/actual documents that I have responded with. The hate messages I have gotten have been atrocious, but I am extremely grateful to the small group of you who have come to me asking if I needed support and saying you believed me. Real judges have believed me based on the abundance of evidence they've been provided with, so I will stick with respecting them and their methods over those used by Redditors, who would prefer to be snarky over uncovering the truth. This has been a unique experience for me because I never understood how maddening it is to see people write falsities about you when you have presented them with evidence. It's a bad place to be. I hope you all think more before you post. As cliché as it is, put yourself in their shoes, or in this case, behind their laptop. Would you like to read that comment if it was written about you? Judging by 99% of the comments I've read, the answer is no. But I'm sure that will be lost on most of you, and instead, I will be reading comments telling me how crazy I am for spilling my heart and telling the truth.

It makes more sense as to why Ashley and Greg were giving cheers "to the sleuths" when they were the sleuths I received a callback from Manny Vargas with the Dreamy Draw Justice Court today who told me that Greg was the one who came into the court and not only requested paper copies, but for them to be emailed to him as well. He said since it was never in effect, the petitioner is the only one who can get copies. Greg never got it served because what was on it was fabricated. The topics posted by Greg and about this need to come down. He is harassing me despite my order of protection, "which was served", against him. AZ is a one-party state, so I am able to post this. Clayton is lying in his video.

That is 100000000000% not true. That's why the press is not running with this. I have already spoken to Page Six and The Sun about this. Regardless of what Clayton says, the test is not inconclusive The "testing is ongoing" because they said that there was an issue with my sample and that they need another sample from me, which I am giving first thing on Wednesday. They have to send a testing kit from Maryland to Arizona, so that's why there is a delay and why I can't get it done on Monday. At :45, Brett at Ravgen said, "we're not saying it's inconclusive, it's just ongoing. We need another sample to finish it up." Brett said that Clayton has been told specifically that even if it were to come back "inconclusive" after this, it definitely does not mean I'm not pregnant and agrees he has misled his followers by saying that. This was just granted. He is now required by law to remove his post as it is untrue and is most certainly causing others to communicate untrue or harassing comments. Also, the press has been sent an ultrasound video.

To the contrarians in this group

Nobody on this forum follows the #1 rule: remember the human. I am disgusted, hurt, and stunned at the cruelty of people on Reddit. Here's a few of the things you guys have said about me: * I've been told to not defend myself by bullies who don't understand what it's like to have an entire community, including an abusive ex-boyfriend, band together to spread falsehoods about you. That doesn't mean I don't have a lot: it means that this is a very immediate "hurt" and something that I have wanted to address because what is being written about me is probably wrong and harmful to my reputation. * I've been told that I have "done this before" when all I have done before is get pregnant twice, get two abortions, and have restraining orders against two men (one of which I obtained TWO YEARS after the pregnancy). * I've been told that my family has "enabled" me and paid for everything when none of you have a clue what my parents' financial situation is. Strangers think that I have been "living off of mommy and daddy for years" when that is the furthest thing from the truth. Many things took place within my family that made that impossible from the time I was a teenager. * I've been told that I'm not pregnant by strangers when multiple doctors have confirmed my pregnancy. Then, you guys have demanded additional proof to you guys when I have given much more beyond "positive" to Clayton and the press. * I've been told that Clayton never sent me the text messages that I said he did when even he hasn't denied sending them. * I've been called names BY STRANGERS that I wouldn't even call my worst enemy, had armchair psychiatrists diagnose me with mental disorders that are laughable, been called "unhinged", evil, etc. I've had my looks and photo editing skills crucified for no reason other than because you guys want to be hurtful. * I've been told that I never was a real estate investor and that I sought out Clayton because he had been "The Bachelor" despite the fact that I never saw his season (and have offered to take a lie detector to prove it). The truth is that I found his firm while searching for #creativefinance on Instagram and contacted them in addition to reading where. I bought property shortly after working with Clayton and have a business doing short term rentals. In order, just because I have been photographed with two former men from BN doesn't mean I am obsessed with the show. I never denied seeing it, I just hadn't seen it in years. Oh and also, let me make this clear: I HAVE NO INTEREST IN DATING CLAYTON. * I've been told that Clayton didn't watch me take a pregnancy test that he purchased when even he admits it in text messages that he hasn't denied, and when the test is clearly on the counter. You guys have also determined that the line should have been darker than it was, not taking into account that Clayton threw out the test as soon as it was visibly positive and didn't wait the full five minutes to see how dark it would get. He agreed with this when I made that argument in response to his email. * I've been told that someone had an RO against me and that the courthouse records are readily available, then still disbelieved despite pursuing a call with the clerk saying that nothing was ever in effect against me. Why would that man get an order granted and then not have it served? Doesn't that seem odd? And that he wouldn't bring it up once during a two year court battle? * I've been told that the "leaked court documents" were true when they were thrown out by the court for "not being true". I've been portrayed as someone who defrauds lawyers when I most definitely have not, when the man who did that against me is a known fraud, and when the lawyer himself backed me up. You guys have also acted like my ex's brother-in-law's word in his declaration was the gospel when that is the only mention in a 220 page court document of a faked pregnancy. Even my abuser himself did not allege that, nor did he allege that my dad said that I "have a tendency to make things up". However, that's a convenient thing to say if you're writing a statement in support of a family member who has no one else to write a witness statement. * I've been told that the conversation I talk about in my TEDx talk never happened and that I fabricated the whole thing, despite that woman giving a declaration in my favor when I got my RO against that man, her being photographed with me while she was visiting Scottsdale this year, and her having her own "Chicken Soup" contribution in their "Get Out of Your Comfort Zone" book. Luckily, I took the proactive step of contacting TED when the defamatory comments started coming out with a mountain of evidence in my favor and they kept my talk up, but turned off the comments. * I've been told BY STRANGERS that only oral sex occurred that night when none of you were there and he has admitted to being "insanely high" that night. When I don't provide further details of a very private sexual encounter, I'm being treated like it's a lie. How many of you want to share intimate details of your sex life with people you don't know? Wouldn't you feel that was a "little" invasive? Calling it "the blow joy baby" is false, but for the sake of Clayton's privacy, I have not wanted to share more. * I've been told that I will "miscarry again" by the Reddit community, who has claimed that I had two miscarriages, despite the fact that I have very openly shown documentation of my two prior abortions. * I've been told that Clayton has an order of protection/injunction against harassment against me when he does not, he has a "pre"-hearing on Monday. The order of protection I asked for against him was granted after the judge considered the evidence. Not so oddly enough, Clayton requested it right after the police called him because "he was harassing me" and after I threatened to get one against him, which is in writing. * I've been told that I have requested a virtual appearance because "I'm not actually pregnant", despite the fact that I have explained to Clayton that based on how everyone has acted towards me, I don't want to be publicly harassed. I've said I will meet up with him anytime to show him that I am. * Clayton stunned me by posting that the results were in when I CLEARLY showed that was not the case with the audio I posted (and AZ is a one party state so recording the call is not illegal). The results aren't even inconclusive: the testing is still in progress. * MOST IMPORTANTLY: The lab will be able to make a statement on Monday (or Tuesday if they are closed for Columbus Day) confirming that the results did not come in early and in fact will be coming in late since they need another sample of my blood test. Clayton very erroneously stated that there was not enough fetal DNA...that meant that "there wasn't enough in that sample, not that there wasn't enough in me." I was told that Clayton knew the results were not back and that this was very carefully explained to him, so he is lying. Luckily, that's easy to prove, as the lab backs me up. Clearly, you guys know so much more about me and my life than I do. I shared confidential documents about my medical history because I wanted to prove that I was telling the truth, but despite people wanting to check them out, no one changed their mind. No one cares to believe me. I'm sorry that I care about my reputation, which you all seem to want to destroy by naming me when I have asked to remain anonymous. Everyone has been so quick to jump to Clayton's defense and do everything to discredit me and every part of my life. I'm sure this will get lots of heartless and disrespectful comments since everyone here is "Team Clayton", but maybe one of you will have the decency to read through and admit you were wrong. Clayton is welcome to post a celebratory post once the results are actually in, but since they're not, I would appreciate a little understanding from this community.
